About the Author

'Iolani L. Bullock is a Bronx native who caught the travel bug at a young age. As a global recruiter, 'Iolani has been lucky to have a career that fed her love of travel and desire to experience other cultures. A diversity, equity and inclusion professional by day and novelist by night, she received her bachelor of arts from New York University and her MBA from Georgetown University. In her spare time, 'Iolani is always looking for another great adventure to share with her family, experimenting with various spices collected from her travels and keeping up with her two children. She believes that our differences are what make us special and that all children deserve to see themselves at the center of a story.

My Inspiration

In 2018, I concocted a plan to make my husband's international work assignment in Thailand coincide with my maternity leave to create an epic adventure for our little family.

While preparing for our trip, I scoured the shelves for books that would help prepare my son Lenox for our journey. As I flipped through the pages, one thing became painfully clear. None of the characters ever looked like him. It was important that he see himself as a traveler, and thus Lenox Takes Flight was born.

This chapter book for 4th - 6th graders will help readers experience the magic of travel, appreciate the unique differences in people and take an adventure through an airport, where all journeys begin.
